Boy Drives to McDonald's

On April 9, 2017, an 8-year-old boy in Ohio decided that he really wanted to eat a cheeseburger. It was eight o'clock at night and both of his parents were sleeping, so he decided to drive there by himself¹. However², he had a problem. He was only eight years old and so, of course, he didn't know how to drive. No problem! After a few minutes of watching YouTube videos about how to drive, he and his 4-year-old sister got into their father's car and drove about two kilometers to McDonald's. It was his first time to drive a car, but he drove through four intersections³ without any accidents. Unfortunately⁴ for the child, the workers at McDonald's called the police when they saw a young boy was driving a car. When Jake Koehler, the policeman, arrived, he asked the boy, "Do you know what you're doing?" The boy replied⁵, "Me and my sister really wanted a cheeseburger." Later, the policeman said to reporters⁶, "I don't think I'll see anything like this the rest of my career⁷." The policeman did not arrest⁸ the hungry, young driver.
