Students Climb Mountain

A local newspaper in China called the Beijing News reports that about a dozen school children between the ages of 6 and 15 must climb about 2,600 feet (792 meters) up a mountain to get to school. How high is 2,600 feet? Well, the tallest building in the world (the Burj Khalifa in Dubai) is 2,720 feet (829 meters). The students live in a small, poor village in Sichuan province. How long does it take to go up and down this mountain? The trip up the mountain takes 90 minutes – the journey down takes 60 minutes. In some places, the children use a small, old ladder to help them. In other places, they use their hands to crawl along the rocks. The village leader says that about 7 or 8 people have already died climbing up the mountain. Why do the children have to put their lives in danger? The answer is that there aren't any roads in the area because the village doesn't have enough money to build them. Because the journey is so dangerous, the kids only come home on weekends. "I hope the story my photos tell will bring some change," says Chen Jie, a photographer who works for the Beijing News newspaper.
